4-H Youth shares her experience attending Senior Leadership Retreat

The Senior Leadership Retreat was an amazing learning experience! All of the workshops and clinics were incredibly informative and gave me so much to think about, in regards to my future. Going into the weekend, I had assumed that the clinics would revolve around ways to improve your leadership skills within 4H. I figured that we would learn new games and activities to utilize at club meetings, which I did, but that wasn't the half of it!

I learned so much more than that. I like to think that the theme of the weekend was, "You're already a 4H leader, what now?" This question permeated the air throughout every single activity. You're already a 4H leader, now what do you want to do? With your life? With your education? With your career? There was workshop after helpful workshop chock full of information. Information on how leadership skills that I've picked up in 4H will transfer into the real world. Information on how a career can build on my 4H experiences. They even went so far as to show us just what career fields someone with our specific talents and knowledge would fare best in. They showed where we would already have a leg up on our competition. They explored so many avenues, highlighting the many ins and outs of an agriculture-based lifestyle.

Every aspect of the weekend was eye-opening, from wandering around the campus, getting insight on the many possible agricultural majors offered, and playing ice breaker games. It was truly astonishing how many different doors active participation in 4H will open. It was amazing to be completely surrounded by my peers. People who talk, think, and work in the exact same ways I do. People with my same values, who have experienced wildly similar things, packed into an auditorium with me. Going to the dances and networking was one of the most rewarding things I have ever experienced in my life. Being able to talk for hours with any one of those amazing people, just building connections. Connections with the world's next generation of scientists, farmers, fashion designers, and computer engineers. To see all these kids my age, who I relate to in a way I have never before experienced.

One thing that really stood out to me was the sheer diversity of the SLR student makeup. Looking around I saw all manner of folk, I saw people with little to nothing in common bonding with one another over their shared interest in livestock. I saw people who had a lot in common branching out, and deciding to bring their shared skills to the aid of the community in completely different ways. Brothers and sisters sharing their wildly different career goals, their wildly different aspirations and values in a way that benefited everyone equally.

SLR was a truly awe-inspiring experience in that it both completely unified every single member of the group, while encouraging each individual to explore their own path. Above all, I think that Senior Leadership Retreat was a weekend focused solely on those among us who see the value of Agriculture in completely different ways. The weekend served to highlight the communities that have been built specifically for us, communities that cannot be truly appreciated nor our potentials truly realized if we don't define ourselves as individuals.

All weekend there was so much overlap with these individuals we have never before met, and will most likely never see again. Overlap between interests, shared career goals, and experiences. But rather than one generalized weekend, it felt as though every single workshop, every single clinic was aimed directly at you. Each session singled me out, and got me thinking about what I want to do with my life. Not what my parents want to see me do, not what would be easiest for me to achieve, not one specific path that I was forced to go down. I was made to think about my individual skills and how that can translate into the real world. How my traditional values, along with my radical ones, would help to fuel my work. I was given resource after resource to help build my tailor-made future. And for that, I will always be grateful to SLR.
